We visited Avalon Technologies' (AVALON IN, Not Rated) plant at Chennai. Key takeaways:

Niche player with backward integration: Avalon is an export-focused electronics, engineering and design manufacturer that has carved a niche for itself through backward integration. The company has manufacturing plants for printed circuit board assembly (PCBA) and box build, cables, metals, plastics, and magnetics. The US is a key market for Avalon, accounting for ~55% of revenue in FY23.

Box build the primary revenue driver: Per management, box build contributes a bulk of the company's revenue at 50% (FY23) and earns slightly higher margins than PCBA. Besides box build and PCBA, Avalon's products and services include design, new product introduction (NPI), cable wire harness, sheet metal, aerospace metal, machining, magnetics, plastics, system integration and logistics.

H1 slow but management sees a better H2: Avalon saw a soft start to FY24 due to a slowdown in the US economy and anticipates a sluggish first half. However, management is optimistic on H2FY24 as it expects India revenue to grow 35%, in line with industry, and US performance to be flattish.

Three focus areas: The company indicated that it is focusing on clean energy, aerospace and hydrogen. Being sunrise segments, management is confident of sustaining a low-double-digit EBITDA margin over FY24-FY26.

Capacity expansion planned: Given large opportunities in the electronics manufacturing services (EMS) business, Avalon has earmarked capex of Rs 400mn to build two manufacturing units in Chennai by FY24. At present, the company has 10 facilities located in India (Chennai and Bengaluru) and 2 in the US.
