Q1FY26 review: short summer hit ECD; W&C outperformed

- Short summer in Q1 led to an inventory overhang, with large appliances getting hit the hardest

Leading W&C companies posted robust double-digit revenue growth (30-31%), led by double-digit volume growth (25-27% YoY)

- Excess inventory (2.2-2.5mn units) aligns with average Q2-Q3 demand of ~3mn units.

Muted summer dampens cooling sales: In Q1, cooling product categories such as air conditioners, air coolers, and fans witnessed sharp volume declines, which weighed on revenue growth in both the ECD and large appliances segments. Within large appliances, cooling products revenue declined 13–25% YoY for VOLT and BLSTR, while Lloyd reported the steepest drop of 34% YoY. In contrast, wires & cables (W&C) sustained a strong revenue momentum, supported by higher copper prices, and lighting fared relatively better vs appliances. On the profitability front, weak volumes in ECD and appliances led to under-absorption of fixed costs, resulting in significant EBIT margin contraction. Meanwhile, leading W&C players such as HAVL and POLYCAB continued to deliver margin improvement.

ECD revenue declined on weak seasonal demand, margins under pressure:

The ECD segment recorded a revenue decline of 8–16% YoY, on account of weak demand for seasonal products like fans and air coolers. However, growth outside of these categories also remained muted due to weak rural demand and only a gradual recovery in discretionary spending. Margins contracted across companies on lower volumes, resulting in under absorption of fixed costs and higher A&P spends in some cases—Havells (-220bps YoY), Bajaj Electricals (-900bps), and Orient Electric (-230bps YoY). Polycab's FMEG segment reported robust profitable growth on low base and product portfolio of solar rooftop business.

RAC excess inventory aligns with Q2-Q3 demand, but margin impact likely:

Inventory overhang remains a concern as industry stocks are running above normal levels – by about one month for some players and up to two months for others. Based on the commentary from leading players, we estimate industry inventories at 2.5–3mn units. Our analysis suggests that combined consumption in Q2–Q3 has the potential to absorb ~3mn units (assuming flat industry growth), indicating that the liquidation of excess inventory should not be a major challenge. However, margin pressure could resurface as brands may (a) lean more on outsourcing vs internal production, given higher inventory at contract manufacturers (providing brands some negotiating leverage) (b) push higher off-season discounting.
