RIL's Rs 750bn endorsement of renewables

- RIL has announced a Rs 750bn foray into developing solar, storage and hydrogen technologies
- RIL's endorsement will attract more investors to renewables. While positive for module buyers, competition will grow if RIL participates in bids
- We prefer players with a focus on renewables and hence have a BUY on TPWR and HOLD ratings on PWGR, TPW, CESC and NTPC

RIL announces entry into renewables...: RIL has announced that it will invest Rs 750bn over three years to enter into: (1) the manufacture of solar modules starting from raw silicon, besides developing at least 100GW of solar capacity by 2030, mostly in the rooftop and distributed generation segments, (2) building grid-scale storage capacity through international collaboration, (3) manufacturing electrolyzers that will be used to produce hydrogen, and (4) developing hydrogen fuel cells for mobile and stationary power applications. In addition, the company will set up a project finance division for renewable energy and construction.

...endorsing irreversible shift towards green energy: RIL's announcement in renewables is a big endorsement of a clean energy future. It is likely to increase investor interest in the sector.

Mixed implications for existing renewable players: Local production of modules, storage batteries and electrolyzers will be positive for renewable generators. Over 80% of modules in Indian solar projects are imported, mostly from China. With duty rising from 15% to 40% from Apr'22, a domestic module source will be a positive as India lacks an integrated silicon-to-module solar industry like China's +100GW ecosystem.

Storage will also, over time, offer a cheaper way of managing renewable intermittency and encourage the move away from coal. Further, cheaper power will support policy change, including critical distribution reforms. However, if RIL starts participating in bids, there is a risk of bidding rates coming down. Entry into construction, rooftop and distributed generation will increase competition for TPWR but may also help open up newer areas for the application of solar technologies.

Prefer players with exposure to renewables: TPWR (BUY) is our top pick in the sector as it has growing exposure to renewables. We have HOLD ratings on NTPC (heavy exposure to coal which is likely to lose share in the generation mix at the cost of renewables), CESC (faces tough competition from larger peers for distribution bids), TPW (has unused capacities and some key concessions coming up for renewal) and PWGR (asset addition to remain tepid).
