Global updates

- The Nasdaq Composite and S&P 500 slipped to their lowest levels in over a week on Tuesday, pressured by sharp declines in semiconductor stocks as investors questioned the sustainability of debt-funded AI spending and turned cautious ahead of a potentially more hawkish stance from the Federal Reserve. Asian markets witnessed a tentative recovery on Wednesday after Tuesday's global technology-led selloff, although concerns persist that the AI-driven rally may have advanced too far, too fast.
- On the currency front, the U.S. Dollar Index broke above the key resistance zone of 100.60, indicating renewed strength in the U.S. Dollar.
- GIFT Nifty trading at ~23,860.00 is indicating a positive opening for the Indian market on Wednesday.

- Nifty closed near the day's low on the weekly expiry, indicating a lack of buying interest at lower levels.

Sector View

Nifty Metal Index has been showing signs of weakness after witnessing a sharp rejection from its recent high of 13,931 on 15th June. Selling pressure intensified across the segment on Tuesday, with the index closing near its day's low and testing the crucial short-term support zone around 12,600. A decisive breakdown below 12,600 could accelerate the corrective phase and trigger further selling pressure across metal stocks.
