Commentary

- Post continued selling pressure during the first half on Wednesday, Nifty witnessed a recovery from the 24900 level and managed to close above the 25000 mark. A long-legged doji candle formation on the daily chart signals buyer resilience and seller exhaustion. Bank Nifty, however, failed to reclaim the 59000 level despite a significant rebound from 58275, eventually closing with a decline of 603 points.
- On the broader front, most sectoral indices appear oversold in the short term, while pockets like IT, Oil & Gas and Energy are showing signs of a bounce from their respective support zones.
- Wednesday's rebound in Nifty points towards an extended upward move in the oversold index, with price likely to attempt 25500 levels, while 25000 now acts as a decisive support.
